Many professionals experience fear and dread when asked to speak in public. But what if your capacity to speak in public was perceived by your colleagues not as a weakness, but as one of your core strengths? Since public speaking is regarded as an indispensable but difficult art, professionals who excel in delivering their message to an audience are immediately perceived as excellent communicators and as being appropriate candidates for leadership roles. To advance oneself professionally, it is essential to improve one's capacity to deliver a persuasive speech or talk - whether the speech in question is an informal or impromptu talk delivered by a leader to his or her team members designed to encourage, motivate and inspire them; or a formal presentation of your organization's mission delivered to the public-at-large.

At the end of the workshop participants will be able to:

- Demonstrate public speaking and presentation techniques - including preparation, structure and delivery;
- Identify personal strengths and weaknesses as presenters;
- Use voice to effect when giving presentations: diction, intonation, rhythm and pacing;
- Deliver online/virtual presentations (etiquette and attention management principles);
- Manage public speaking anxiety.

The course is designed to be interactive and participatory, including various pedagogical tools to enable the participants to function effectively and efficiently in a multilateral environment. The course will be built on four pedagogical pillars: concept learning (lectures and presentations), role-playing (group exercises), experience sharing (roundtable discussions), and exposure to real-world problems and policy choices delegates are confronted with.

This course is open to:

- Members of Permanent Missions accredited to the United Nations Office in Geneva;
- Delegates of Ministries of Foreign Affairs and other government officials;
- Representatives of international, intergovernmental, and non-governmental organizations and Diplomatic academies;
- Members of the private sector.
